I first went into this module scared because I have never done any extensive research like this before. After my first draft and seeing what I needed to fix up, I realized that I can write and do research essays much better than before. I needed to find an interesting topic though. I thought to myself, "what is simple yet has a bunch of information and attention grabbing". I realized the positive and negative effects of social media is what I needed to do. The Annotated bibliography was a nice and refreshing way to have a better understanding of my topic, or any topic for that matter. And I feel that is if I am now more organized with what I have to write about. I am excited to see my progress within these next modules to see how I used my new skill with looking for research and plugging it into my essays.
